Fox Center for Humanistic Inquiry and Public Humanities @Emory invite you to a short presentation and discussion about Emory’s new Center for Healthcare History and Policy. Led by Dr. Kylie Smith, the Center opens opportunities for collaborative research and public-facing projects.

Originating in the School of Nursing, the Center for Healthcare History and Policy (CHHAP) is aimed at making connections and building collaborations across Emory University and Healthcare. The Center’s mission is to expand and integrate knowledge about the historical, structural and social factors affecting health care, analyzing the ways that disparities are created, perpetuated, and experienced.

Join us to talk about the Center and its work, your own research interests, and possible collaborations: NOV 16 5 p.m. - 7 p.m. Atwood Chemistry 360 Refreshments will be provided.

Founding Director, Dr. Kylie Smith, is a historian of psychiatry, nursing, and medicine in the School of Nursing and Associate Faculty in the Department of History. Dr. Smith is excited to lead this initiative and keen to find ways the Center can support the work of students and faculty in this area.
