The seminars will be held on Zoom, from 4:15-6:15 pm. Papers (of about 20 pages) will be circulated in advance so that most of each two-hour session can be devoted to open discussion and interdisciplinary dialogue. In each hour, one of the authors provides a précis (10 minutes), followed by a brief (five-minute) formal response, usually from a different disciplinary perspective. The remainder of the hour is devoted to open discussion among all participants.

If you would like to attend the Zoom seminar, please register here. The Zoom invitation will be circulated along with papers the week before the seminar to those who have registered for the event.
