The Emory Digital Humanities Symposium: DH for the Study and Teaching of South Asia is a two-day interdisciplinary and international symposium on newly formed approaches to digital humanities (DH) in the field of South Asian Studies. The two-day symposium of panels, demos, and a roundtable discussion will replicate the cycle of scholarly production – one in which scholars access archives or create their own, analyze data, teach about their research, produce scholarship, and publish in some format for public consumption.

ARCHIVES
Ellen Ambrosone & Neel Agrawal (South Asia Open Archive)
Gil Ben-Herut & Jon Keune (Connected Bhakti Bibliographies Database)
Guneeta Singh Bhalla (Partition Archive)
Poushali Bhadury (Digitization in West Bengal)

TEXT
Andrew Ollett (Technologies for Texts)
Nicole Merkel-Hilf (Naval Kishore Press – Digital)

DEMOS
Andrew Ollett (SARIT)
Yigal Bronner (Pandit Project)
Charles Li and Tim Bellefleur (Digital Sanskrit Manuscripts)

MEDIA
Anandi Silva Knuppel (Knowledge and Media)
Sumathi Ramaswamy (Tasveerghar & Going Global in Mughal India)
James Nye (Huntington Archive of Buddhist and Asian Art)
Nicole Ranganath (Pioneering Punjabis Digital Archive)

PEDAGOGY
Rahul Gairola (TBD)
Constance Kassor (Digital Assignments in the Buddhist Studies Classroom)
Mark McLaughlin (Hindu Temples in the Classroom using Virtual Reality)

OPEN ACCESS PUBLISHING ROUNDTABLE
Amardeep Singh | Melanie Kowalski | Sarah McKee | Andrew Ollett | Nicole Merkel-Hilf

FOR MORE INFORMATION ABOUT THE SYMPOSIUM, CONTACT
Ellen Ambrosone (ellen.ambrosone@emory.edu) and Anandi Silva Knuppel (anandi.silva.knuppel@emory.edu).
RSVP at tinyurl.com/DH4SA2018

The Emory Digital Humanities Symposium is supported by Emory Libraries and the Emory Center for Digital Scholarship and is generously funded by the Emory University Libraries Innovation Grants; Emory Conference Center Subvention Fund; Emory Laney Graduate School New Thinkers/New Leaders Fund; Institute for Qualitative Theories and Methods; Fox Center for Humanistic Inquiry; Emory Center for Digital Scholarship; and Middle Eastern and South Asian Studies, Religion, and Sociology departments.