The Fox Center for Humanistic Inquiry, along with the Emory College of Arts and Sciences Honors Program and the Halle Institute for Global Research, will offer up to ten Fellowships to support work on completing honors projects for the spring semester. The purpose of these Fellowships is to provide undergraduates with the opportunity to participate in a vibrant research community of Emory faculty, graduate students, and visiting scholars housed at the Fox Center. In addition to having fellowship resources, Undergraduate Humanities Honors Fellows will be awarded a $1000 stipend to help support their research and writing. Fellows are expected to participate in the intellectual life of the Center and its programs. Honors Fellows will register in the Fox Center’s Honors Seminar ECS 470 (1 credit hour) and present their work to the other Fellows at the FCHI Spring Honors Colloquium. The seminar will meet from 4-6pm on January 18, February 15, March 15, and March 29. Honors Fellows are required to submit a completed copy of their theses to the Center. The Fellowship begins the first day of the Spring semester and runs through Commencement.

The FCHI Humanities Honors Fellows Program is designed both for students of humanities departments and programs as well as students working with humanistic issues in the social and natural sciences. Students must be part of the Honors Program of the Emory College of Arts and Sciences, and their projects must be humanistic, but students may be enrolled in any program. Honors Fellows are expected to graduate in Spring 2023.
